

The Diamond Appraisal Process

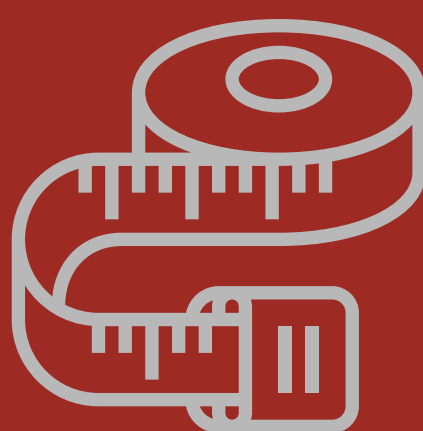

It's imperative to get an appraisal on your diamond before selling to determine your piece's second-hand market value — and get the most for it.

Before determining its value, your jeweler will thoroughly clean your jewelry or loose diamonds.

Your diamond's length, width, and depth will be documented, as well as what kind of shape it should be categorized as.

Your jeweler will use sophisticated tools to inspect the gem for any damage or blemishes.

Determining the Four C's of Diamond Quality

- Carat: The weight of your diamond. Rarer, heavier diamonds are of higher value.
- Clarity: A diamond with no flaws and a greater clarity has a higher value
- Color: All diamonds have a tint of color. If your's has a small tint, it may be worth more
- Cut: The cut refers to how the light reflects off the diamond
